

Featuring over 60 dresses from the Missouri History Museum's world-renowned textile collection, this fun yet thought-provoking exhibit explores the subject of mourning, as well as the transition of black from a symbol of grief to a symbol of high fashion. You'll also see fascinating artifacts—from hair jewelry to tear catchers—that were once a regular part of the mourning process. Plus, you'll have the chance to share your own memories of your favorite little black dress and even get the opportunity to design your own dress! Admission to the exhibit is free.

Thursday, June 2 Meet at the Clubhouse at 10am

We will carpool and get lunch at a place to be determined after the museum. Questions: Sandy Bohn 561-1345
